

BIOGRAPHY:

When a piñata smashes. When you cross a bridge's great expanse, surrounded by water and sunshine. When you taste the perfect cupcake. A life well lived allows for a series of thrills. And now you can add hearing the butterscotch-sticky-rock 'n' roll music of Seattle's GoFetch to the top of that list.

Founded by two musicians who could be lost members of Heart's Wilson family, singer Heather Reynosa emanates surging, over the moon vocals while multi-instrument virtuoso Geoff Woodhouse composes fuzzy-yet-distinct licks. Combined, GoFetch is a power plant of hard, catchy songs reliant only on musical adoration to fuel the operation.

Their original compositions unite smirking humor with grand swells of music of which Cher would be proud.

Las Vegas-born and Alaska-raised, Reynosa is a classically trained vocalist and has wowed audiences from Seattle Seahawk pre-game festivities to stages in prominent local venues like The Hard Rock Café and Nectar Lounge. Woodhouse, whose played in beloved bands from Los Angeles to Seattle, is fluent in many genres, from rock to beloved covers.

Together, they rise.
